Green Velours – fine acoustic rock

Green Velours offer a fine selection of rock and pop songs from the last decades and current charts. Presenting established songs (numbers/compositions) in their very own acoustic style with the striking voice of singer Amanda Porter the quartet manages to walk the thin line between inspiring the audience with their catchy arrangements and avoiding worn out paths in form of simple standards that can be heard too often these days.

The Band was formed in summer 2009 after the four musicians from the UK and Germany had made their own experiences in numerous projects and bands in rock, soul, jazz and other styles in their musical life. They are no rookies to being on stage, but with their individual background and influences combined with conjoint empathy and excitement for what they do together they are exactly the opposite of an average cover band, getting bored with what they play.

Guitarist Steve Walker extends the already wide variety by taking over the lead singing part for a few songs. Supported by drummer Udo Liebert on the T-Box (Cajon) or the full set and Jens Schaffer on electric or acoustic bass guitar Green Velours offer a fresh view on forgotten and present musical treasures and time and again manage to infect the audience with their good fun and easy going attitude on stage.
